This research relates to the case of buying and selling of dumolid drugs in the case of actor Tora Sudiro, one type of drug that is classified as a psychotropic drug that is sold and easily found in several pharmacies, namely dumolid drug. The drug dumolid contains the active substance Nitrazepam which can affect the central nervous system causing changes typical of a person's mental activity and behavior. The abuse of dumolid drugs is regulated in Law Number 5 of 1997 concerning Psychotropics (hereinafter referred to as the Psychotropic Law). Related to the problem of dumolid drug abuse in Indonesia, it is necessary to know the regulation of dumolid drug abusers in terms of Indonesian criminal law as well as the form of criminal liability for the dumolid drug abusers. The type of research used in writing this journal is the type of normative legal research, by looking at the existing problems which are then linked to laws and regulations. The results of the study show that the criminal sanctions given as a form of criminal responsibility for dumolid drug abusers are based on Article 62 of the Psychotropic Law, which states that dumolid drug abusers are given criminal sanctions in the form of imprisonment and fines. Article 37 paragraph (1) and paragraph (20) and Article 41 of the Psychotropic Law state that psychotropic dependence can be subject to rehabilitation sanctions, as an alternative to imprisonment. However, whether Tora Sudiro is responsible for his crimes alone, it is at this point that this legal research takes place.
