THE MEDIATING ROLE OF ECONOMIC LITERACY ON FAMILY ECONOMIC EDUCATION AND ENTREPRENEURIAL INTENTIONS OF MANAGEMENT UNDERGRADUATES IN DKI JAKARTA

(XVII + 93 Pages; 3 Figures ; 28 Tables ; - Appendices)

Indonesia is facing serious problems related to poverty and unemployment, especially among graduates with various levels of education. One of the reasons is the low interest in entrepreneurship. This study was conducted to evaluate the effect of family economic education and peer groups on entrepreneurial intention, and the mediating role of economic literacy in the relationship between family economic education and peer groups on entrepreneurial intention among management undergraduates in DKI Jakarta City, Indonesia. This study is a quantitative-based research. The subjects of this study are individuals who are management undergraduates in DKI Jakarta, with an age range of 21-26 years. The data collection process was carried out online by distributing questionnaires to prospective respondents via google form. The sampling process used a non-probability sampling technique, using the purposive sampling method. The minimum sample size determined for this study was 250 samples. The data analysis method used in this research is PLS-SEM using the SmartPLS version 4 program. The research conducted statistical data analysis, namely descriptive statistics and inferential statistics. As a result, this study can state that all or all seven research hypotheses are supported. So this study succeeded in proving that family economic education and peer groups have a positive and significant effect on economic literacy, family economic education and peer groups positively and significantly influence entrepreneurial intention, and economic literacy significantly mediates the relationship between family economic education and peer groups on entrepreneurial intention among management undergraduates in DKI Jakarta City, Indonesia. Parents, universities, and the government are advised to support and facilitate the improvement of economic literacy to stimulate individual entrepreneurial intention.
