In the era of rapid globalization, increased cross-border mobility necessitates fast, easy, and high-quality public services in the field of immigration. Immigration Office TPI Tanjung Perak Surabaya is expected to provide professional, transparent, and accountable public services in line with the principles of reform. This study aims to analyze the influence of service quality dimensions compliance, assurance, reliability, tangibles, empathy, and responsiveness on customer satisfaction at the Tanjung Perak Immigration Office in Surabaya. A quantitative approach was used, with data collected through questionnaires distributed to 180 applicants who had used services at the Tanjung Perak Immigration Office from January to December 2024. The data were analyzed using Structural Equation Modeling (SEM) with SmartPLS 4 software to examine the relationships between service quality variables, customer satisfaction, and customer loyalty. The results of this study show that assurance, tangibles, empathy, and responsiveness have a significant influence on satisfaction, while compliance and reliability do not. Additionally, satisfaction has a significant influence on loyalty. These findings offer strategic input for public service institutions to place greater emphasis on emotional interaction quality and service speed in enhancing customer satisfaction.
